

Gabby Delgado
02/06/2023
Leadership

ASB Meeting February

Name: Gabby Delgado

Position: Historian

Date: February 6, 2023

Position assessment: Finally, the time has come where the scrapbook is in full swing. Gabby and I have been busy making sure everyone is on top of their scrapbook page because it gets really difficult when you have to schedule people to make it up on the weekends. I took in the individual scrapbook pages while Gabby has been taking care of winterfest. There has been a problem with people not remembering when their scrapbook page is, leading me to reach out to them. Usually I wait until leadership to remind them, but if they don't remember to send me pictures even after then it messes everything up. So far so good and I can't wait for everyone to see the finished product. Beyond my job I have just been trying to support my class in everything. I unfortunately was unable to participate in the night rally dance this time around due to time conflicts but it turned out great.

Standing committee: Not applicable at this time.

Special committee: I would say that I am a part of multiple special committees this month. One of which being something that I was very excited to be a part of because it brought me back to when I was in Middle School. I got to recruit for leadership to Ripon El's eighth graders! Although the experience was interesting to say the least, it really made me happy that I was able to stand where seniors before me stood and inspired me to join the program. Another committee that I am a part of is Valentine Day heart for the school. I am in charge of a couple of teachers and a handful of students to write about. This is a very impactful thing we do on campus and although it is very time consuming, it is worth it in the end. Once again another committee that has not yet started on my end but is in the works in the Gallery of the Arts publicity! Last year I got roped into it and it was actually pretty fun. Everytime I walk into Bowers, 4th period, I see the canva poster I made for him.

Mentorship: My brand new mentor this semester is none other than my name twin Gabby M! I was very glad to have been paired with her and get to know her as we go on more mentorship lunches. As for lunch we did go! We went to the Sacred Heart meeting together and there was a lot of time left of lunch so we were just talking and hanging out. It was really chilly.

Concerns: A concern that I have is with election season. This is a very tense time of year where people are going against each other for positions and towards the end of the year, some may not make it in the program next year, but still have to be in the program this year. I am just hoping that no feelings are hurt and that we all get along after!

Positive comment: I would like to leave a positive comment for Makenzie. I will never understand her dedication and time that she is willing to give into something whether it's a big deal or a small thing. For example when she said she was going to volunteer to sit for 3 days and just watch and make sure that everyone was going to show up to their shift at the almond blossom parking lot, I was literally thinking "girl you are crazy" but I was also thinking "yea that sounds like something mak would make fun". Only she would be that dedicated to something and it is pretty inspiring honestly.

Change: Jaydin brought this up in class and I thought it was an amazing idea! A small section in our ASB write up that is for small accomplishments. I love that idea. We sometimes overlook our small accomplishments and moments of growth and it is important to recognize those. Reaching small goals is the stepping stones to catching big ones. I have been loving the workdays lately because I need it. There isn't any big changes this time, but I hope there won't be any next year as we Accomplishments- Doing a never before ESPN show during a basketball game with student reporters! It got nearly 4,000 views and I was so happy with it and I was so proud that I edited it and pushed it out within a day!